Col. Parsons Asks by What Authority He Undertakes His Late Dictation.

WHAT ARE THE TERMS OF SURRENDER?

The Colonel Laboring Under the Vain Hope That Senator Daniel Could Be Displaced by a Republican.

Washington, D. C., Sept. 19.—Colonel H. C. Parsons, the noted Virginia Republican leader, has issued an open letter to General Mahone questioning the right of the latter to dictate the policy of the Virginia Republicans in the next campaign and censuring him in polite terms for doing so. Colonel Parsons' principal grievance is the action of General Mahone as chairman of the State committee in advising the Republicans of the State not to nominate any candidates in the next election. "Under what commission and by what right," asks Colonel Parsons, "do you under-take this new dictation? The responsibility of leadership does not, and cannot, depend of leadership does not, and cannot, depend upon your personal opinion or preference," Colonel Parsons goes on to tell General Mahone that the Alliance movement brings the Republican opportunity. He denies the statement in the Mahone manifesto that the alections in Virginia are generally corrupt. "When you ask our committee in Rockbridge county," he says, "to indorse this declaration they cannot do it, because it is not true, Our registration and our count is as fair as it is in other fiercely contested States."

is in other fiercely contested States." Colonel Parsons says the statement is a declaration that the State is unfit for immigration or residence. "In your defeat (for Governor), continues Colonel Parsons, 'the Democrats resorted to unparalleled and unnecessary devices, but, then, violence does not warrant us in denouncing our State. I found my neighbors men open to augument and believed that in time passion and prejudice would give way to common sense and justice." Referring to General Mahone's secret circular issued just before the Republican National Convention of 1888, "calling upon your trusted agents by concerted action," to quote Colonel Parsons, "to pack the approaching conventions in the interest of Sherman, giving as a reason that you had personal knowledge that Blaine was at work to secure the State and that you had private knowledge of THE WATERLOO RECALLED. eige that Blaine was at work to secure the State and that you had private knowledge of his having made a corrupt political bargain that proved his hatred towards Southern Republicans and his dislovalty to his party." Colonel Parsons says, "the swift answer came to those who read in parallel columns your exposed circular and Blaine's letter from Florence. Very few besides yourself were astonished when, with an unquestioned majority and National rebuke, you were driven from the doors of the National convention, and the spirit rose that made Harrison candidate and President." Colonel Parsons calls on General Mahone to cancel his circular and call a convention to consider the future policy of the party.

WHAT PRICE DID THEY BRING?

WHAT PRICE DID THEY BRING? He says that if General Mahone's advice

He says that if General Manone's advice means anything it means that the Republican vote shall be delivered to the Alliance, and he repeatedly asks Mahone upon what terms are the Republicans sold. "The reason you assign is so insufficient," says Colonel Parsons, "that we naturally inquire what the real terms are. The pian of perfecting an organization by abandoning a compaign and joining the ranks of your opponents is so unique and unsual that it requires explanation. You are regarded as too astute to have surrendered unconditionally. What are your real terms? If there is a line of retreat, it should be clearly defined. We cannot follow you blind and dumb." Colonel Parsons says the Republicans of Diplomatly Controversy Over the Conetruction of Our Chinese Exclusion Act.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 19 .- A diplomatic controversy has arisen between the United States and Great Britain about the United States and Great Britain about the proper construction of the Chinese exclusion act, as it affects Chinamen residing in Canada and who enter the United States. The questions involved have been brought officially to the attention of the United States Government by Sir Julian Pauncefote, who has requested the President to pardon Chong Sam, a Chinaman now in jail at Port Huron, Mich., on the charge of being unlawfully in the United States. Chong Sam entered the United States from Canada. He was arrested and upon being tried before the United State Commissioner, he was found guilty of being unlawfully in the United States and sentenced to deportation to China as the being unlawfully in the United States and sentenced to deportation to China as the country "whence he came." On the request of the British Minister, Chong Sam was not immediately deported. He claimed he was a British subject, but was unable to produce his naturalization papers. The British Minister now petitions for his pardon as a British subject in the face of the decision by the United States Commissioner, holding that he is a subject of China and should be sent back there. The matter, with all the correspondence in the case, has been referred to Attorney-General Miller to ascertain Chong Sam's allegiance.

UNWARRANTED PROSECUTIONS.

The attention of Attorney-General Miller was to-day called to the fact that prosecutions have recently been a mmenced in Milwaukee against the publishers of certain newspapers there for sending through the mails their papers reproducing from the San Francisco Examiner and the Boston Heraldan argument against the validity of the Anti-Lottery law passed by the Fifty-first Congress. "These prosecutions," said the Attorney-General. "I have directed to be dismissed. The articles were published and republished with the evident purpose of attempting to create a public sentiment against the law rather than to advertise the business of any lottery company. In my opinion the law was not directed against the circulation of such publications in the mails, and the prosecutions, therefore, were ill-advised and ought not to be continued. While I am in favor of prosecuting vigorously every infraction of the law, whether direct or evasive, I think the refusel of the use of the mails to paper discussions the receivance of policy of the law is fusal of the use of the mails to papers dis-cussing the principles of policy of the law is unwarranted, and would burt rather than help the cause in the interest of which the w was enacted.

The Times representative at the White Sulphur yesterday, upon being instructed to investigate and obtain full particulars of the duel, telegraphed that the report was denied by all parties at the Springs who were likely to possess information of the affair.

The evasive answers of the persons questioned left the impression that strenuous efforts are being put forth to prevent the publication of the matter.

People coming to the city from the White Sulphur last night also professed absolute ignorance on the subject. Some of the railway officials stated that it was simply a rumor without foundation, and grew out of a difficulty between two circus women, in which no men took any part.

THE MUCH ADO ABOUT NOTHING

The Matter One of Little Novelty or Inportance in Itself.

GREAT BRITAIN FIRM AND UNDAUNTED.

If Russian War-Ships are to Pass Into the Mediterranean English War-Ships Will Appear in the Black Sea.

(Copyright Cable, 1891, by the United Press.) London, Sept. 19 .- The many misleading reports published regarding the Dardanelles affair, together with the reported seizure of Sigri by England, makes it more important that trustworthy information concerning the matter should be obtained from some authoritative English source, Great Britian being regarded as the power interested in the Dardanelles question. An attache of the British Foreign Office, whose name for obvious reasons is withheld, said in an interview today: The waters have been ruffled by the recent passage of the Dardanelles and more has been made of the incident than would have been made of it at an earlier and busier period of the year. Still it is not without importance, if only as a link in a chain, a fur ther step in a steady process of encroachment. The vessel in question was the Moscow of the Russian volunteer fleet, and it was stopped because, though it had troops on board, no previous notice of its desire to pass had been received. The Russian answer was that the customary notice was not in that particular case thought necessary, as the only troops on board were time expired men.

The Russian Ambassador even went so far as to demand indemnity for the retention of the vessel. The Porte forwarded an abject apology to the Ambassador, undertook to pay the indemnity at once and promised that the incident shall not recur. reasons is withheld, said in an interview to-

The Constantinople correspondent of the Lendon Standard remarked that Russian diplomacy has therefore, achieved a complete victory on this question, and henceforth the straits would be open to her vessels, while closed to those of other nations, a foolish gloss which has been treated by some German and Austrian newspapers with a seriousness altogether disproportionate to its importance. The matter is one that has little novelty or importance in itself. The time when the Standard should have made this fuss was in April last when the convention was drawn up, of which the passage of the Moscow was a minor consequence. Turkey then agreed that Russian ships with troops on board might pass the straits on condition of preliminary notice being given. That was a real step in advance for Russia. In an annex to the treaty of Paris, confirmed by the treaty of Berlin in 1878, and therefore still the law of Europe, the Sultan declared his firm resolution to maintain for the future the principles invariably established as the ancient rule of the Empire. LITTLE NOVELTY OR IMPORTANCE declared his firm resolution to maintain for the future the principles invariably establish-ed as the ancient rule of the Empire, and in virtue of which it has at all times been prohibiting ships of foreign powers to enter the straits of the Dardenelles and of the Bosphorus. On their part all the powers, including Russia, engaged "to respect this determination of the Sultan and to conform themselves to the principles above declared."

UNDER RUSSIA'S INFLUENCE.

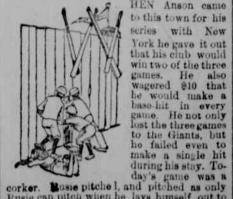

years been repeatedly complained of by the Porte. Quite recently, however, the Porte has fallen almost exclusively under the influence of Russia, and by the April convention Russia succeeded in giving a certain appearance of order and regularity to a long standing encroachment. Of course that convention has never been recognized by the other powers. The rule that no foreign ships of war shall pass the straits received the adhesion of all the powers in 1881. Russia has never torn up that convention as she tore up the treaty of Paris in 1870, or rather that part of it which prohibited the formation of a Russian fleet in the Black aca. But of course the fleet was no sconer formed than the veto upon exit in the Mediterranean was found extremely galling and much Russian activity has of late years been devoted to undermining and destroying this prohibition. The policy was not to defy it topenly, but to encroach step by step till some day Europe should find itself confronted with an accomplished fact. One of these steps was to send transports through the straits, and when objection was raised to protest that a transport was not a ship of war, andithat, therefore, the treaties had not been broken. Another was to make play with the ships of the Russian volunteer fleet. These, it is alleged, are no more ships of war than are the Cunarders on which the British admiralty has a are no more ships of war than are the Cu-narders on which the British admiralty has a narders on which the british admirate has claim in case of an outbreak of hostilities, and which will then be used as cruisers. The Moscow is one of those nondescripts, and can be described as a war-ship or merchantman according to your point of view.

The restriction of Russia's war-ships to the one sea in which they can do little or nothing to affect events could not but be irritating to her and any other power similarly placed would her and any other power similarly placed would have worked and intrigued against the prohibition much as she has done. At the same time Russia cannot eat her cake and have it. If she is bent before all things on bringing her ships into the Mediterranean she will probably in the long run have her [way. Only if Russian ships are to have free exit to the Mediterrate.] ships are to have free exit to the Mediterranean, English ships, and for that matter the ships of all powers, must have free entrance into the Black sea. That will not suit Russia.
What she wants is to have the Black sea recognized as a closed domestic sea, where other war-ships have no right to show themselves; she can come in it as much as she pleases, but they must not come in. To that, however, Europe, and in particular England, will never agree. If Turkey is foolish enough to open the straits to the one powerit behooves her to keep out of them she must understand that the ipso facto opens them to all derstand that the ipso facto opens them to all the world. The other powers are no longer the world. The other powers are no longer bound by a promise to respect the Sultan's resolution when that resolution was that the straits should be impartially shut against all alike. Nor can Turkey keep the ships of other powers out by force. The English fleet could force the passage of the Dardanelles and Bosphorus at any moment and if Russian war-ships are to pass into the Mediterranean English war-ships will certainly appear in the

FATHER IGNATIUS INDIGNANT. Father Ignatius has returned from his American sojourn with a grievance against the Protestant Episcopal Church of the United States. He has declared that it is high time for the English Church to repudiate the time for the English Church to repudiate the American communion, on the ground that it harbors heretics like Rev. Heber Newton, who is encouraged in his perfidy by the new Bishop of Massachusetts, Right Rev. Phillips Brooks. For America and Americans Igna-tius professes the most kindly feelings and the most grateful regard. In spite of this the probable injunction against his preaching in several places in the United States has left a rankling wound. EXTRAORDINARY MURDER CONFESSION Extraordinary confession of murder has just been made by Herbert Arthur Green, a respectable young man of a good social position. The unfortunate man declares that he murdered his daughter Louisa five years old. The child, it was thought, was drowned while swimming with her father at Brighton. To add to the horror of the situation she died in full view of her mother and sister, who were standing on the shore. Green himself was arrested after the child's death and tried to commit suicide. He confessed he administered poison to the child on the beach and intended to do likewise to his other child. other child.

London man whose ventures in a single day amounted to 600,000 francs, left Ostenda few amounted to 600,000 francs, left Ostend a few days ago with enormous gains, and he is but one of several players who have had astonishing luck this season, with a severe loss to the bank. In fact, all the summer the Germans has been by far the heaviest players. Yet among the English checks for five and ten thousand pounds have been drawn. One player from London drew a check for 14,000 pounds. Play begins at 11 o'clock in the morning, and continues all day and night. The founders of the Managers' Club are not Belgians, but Parisians. They pay a royalty to the municipality of Ostend amounting to three hundred thousand francs for the season.

SENSATION AT A CONCERT.

SENSATION AT A CONCERT. A sensational incident occurred at a large concert given last night that caused considerable amusement and comment to-day. the moment when the intermission came tween the first and second programmes of the concert a lady entered the half and walked rapidly down the centre aisle until she reached rapidly down the centre aisle until she reached the stage. Then, turning her face to the audience, she threw off her cloak and appeared in full evening dress and said in a loud voice: "Ladies and gentlemen, I endeavored to secure proper recognition as a singer to which my voice entitles me. Until this summer people of my own city have not been willing to listen to me. I received no opportunity and no encouragement. It remained for an American to show me common justice. Whitney Mockridge, of Chicago, is that American. He heard me and has given me an engagement in the United States. I am determined that my country people shall hear me once before I leave." After saying this the lady calmly and with great self-possession lady calmly and with great self-possession sang several difficult airs, which commanded the attention of the entire house. After ten minutes of a vocal entertainment from one performer, she put her wrap about her and left the building amid the heartiest and most

A CHAPTER OF PARISIAN CRIME. A Widow Revenges the Wrongs to Her Children With the Knife.

expression has been brought to light by a tragedy in a narrow street of Southeastern Paris Wednesday. On the fifth floor of a house there lived a poor blind widow, Mere Guichoux, with her two children. She idolhouse there lived a poor band, whow, and Guichoux, with her two children. She idolized Robert, a steady, hard-working lad, and Rosa, a clever sales girl, who was inclined to be religious. All was happiness at the widow's home until half a year ago there came to live on the same floor Camille Rourtier, a courtezan whose prettiness had not wholly been destroyed by dissipation. She infatuated Robert, who at first was not aware of her character, but her demands for money finally drove him to drink and he lost his position, which resulted in his becoming a thief. She was not satisfied with his ruin, and being jealous of the respectable social position occupied by Rosa accomplished her downfall after several months of artful persuasion. For some time Mere Guichoux remained ignorant of the state of affairs, Robert's changed conduct led her to upbraid him, and he then told of Rosa's fall from virtue. The poor mother, prostrated by the terrible revelations of her children's shame, finally suspected Camille. She extorted a confession from Rosa that convinced her of the guilt of the courtezan. On the morning following the day she learned the terrible truth, she bade Rosa lead her to the presence of Camille on the pretense of examining a new dress Camille wore. She located her bosom, and suddenly drawing a carving knife from beneath her dress, plunged it into the breast of the girl, who now lies in a critical condition at the city hospital.

HOLY EARTH

To Be Placed in the Comn of the Crows

Prince Rudolph.
[Dunlap Special Cable to The Times.] VIENNA, Sept. 19.-The Archduke Francis Ferdinand of Austria yesterday received a Ferdinand of Austria yesterday received a strange visit from a gentleman, who presented him with a sack full of holy earth which had been taken from the Chapel of the Ascension at Mt. Olives. This earth he was allowed to take on the express understanding that it be placed in the coffin of the late Crown Prince Rudolph. The Archduke accepted the present and promised to execute the wish. It appears that there is a widespread belief that this earth preserves bodies from corruption.

The Pope Financially Embarrassed.

[By Cable to The Times.] (By Cable to The Times.)

London, Sept. 19.—A dispatch from Rome says that the financial condition of the Pope is getting to be almost embarrassing, and that unless the contributions of the faithful flow in more liberally His Holineas will have to cut off some of the expenses to which the papal purse is now subject. It has been suggested to the Pope to do away with the pension list of old servants and dependents who held office under the temporal power and remained faithful throughout the struggle. The Pope, it is said, refused to entertain the thought.
